The influx of Rohingya from Myanmar to Bangladesh is still going on. So far, more than half of a million Rohingya people have fled from Myanmar to Bangladesh since 25th August 2017. Rakhine state of Myanmar has become a crucible of religious hatred focused on the stateless Rohingya Muslim minority, who are reviled and perceived as illegal immigrants in Buddhist-majority Myanmar. To survive from the violence Rohingya people are leaving Myanmar. Local community people, local NGOs started the humanitarian responses to the Rohingya refugees. Along with local communities and NGOs, local administration, UN organizations, international organizations and NGOs are also now providing various relief supports. Bangladesh army is now working to coordinate the relief operation.
